Our Staffs

Fellow classmates,

Four years of high school are over. For some of us, they have been the best years of our lives; for others, they have been the worst. One thing, however, that we can say for each member of the Class of '84 is that these years were nothing like the warning George Orwell gave in 1984.

In fact, no where in the world do we see Orwell's society, one comprised solely of brain-washed individuals controlled by a few. The opposite is particularly true of RMHS in the sense that we neither fulfilled George Orwell's fears nor did we follow the precedents of past classes. The Class of '84 showed tremendous initiative and determination in altering old patterns. Our Junior Prom was the first in Reading's history to be held outside of the high school. In addition, we staged two particularly successful fundraisers, the Shaw Brothers' Concert and the Magic Show. In the following pages, the editors of Pioneer '84 have aspired to portray the individualism of our class.

We hope that these pages will serve as a reminder of Orwell's warning, and as an illustration of comparable hope.

Sincerely,

Martha Dustin Bill Herzog

Our junior year in high school — a time for fun, laughter, friendship — and a time for growth. In the span of those few short months, we lost four friends in tragedies over which we had no control. Suddenly our class was forced to look at death from a new perspective — not as something that happens to older people, but as something that can happen to teenagers as well.

When Lisa Thompson died in November of 1982, feelings of shock, anger, frustration and depression gripped the students and faculty of RMHS. It was impossible to understand how a person our own age could suddenly be taken from us. Three months later when another freak accident claimed the lives of Michele Rhoades, Patrice McNeil, and Lisa Cummings, we began to realize the extent of our own vulnerability. No longer was death a far away stranger — we had begun to grow up.

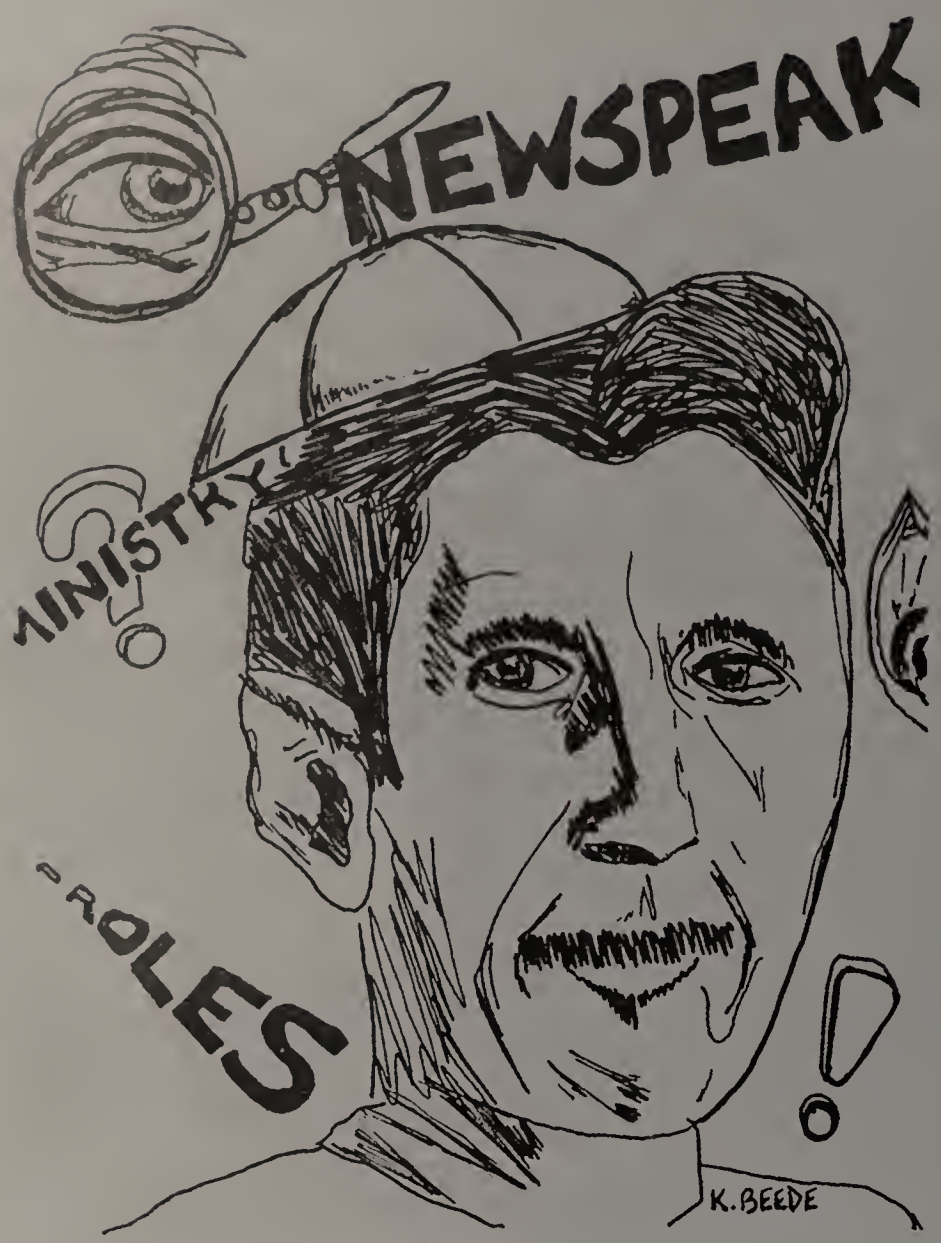

During the months following these tragedies, the reality of death drew us together and strengthened many friendships. We realized that people may die at any age; therefore, we came to value to a greater extent those around us.

In our four years at Reading Memorial High School we have met many outstanding faculty members who have helped us prepare for the future in different ways. But the death of four friends has bonded our class together and left an impression that will never be forgotten. Because their deaths have so deeply affected our class, we dedicate Pioneer '84 to the memory of Lisa, Michele, Patrice, and Lisa. We love you.

Nature

As a fond mother, when the day is o'er,
  Leads by the hand her little child to bed,
  Half willing, half reluctant to be led,
  And leave his broken playthings on the floor,
Still gazing at them through the open door,
  Nor wholly reassured and comforted
  By promises of others in their stead,
  Which, though more splendid, may not please him more:
So Nature deals with us, and takes away
  Our playthings one by one, and by the hand
  Leads us to rest so gently, that we go
Scarce knowing if we wish to go or to stay,
  Being too full of sleep to understand
  How far the unknown transcends the what we know.

— Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

George Orwell's momentous novel, 1984, describes a world in which war, alienation, dehumanization, and fear are the only constants. Society is hierarchical, and consists of several echelons. Big Brother ultimately rules Oceania, one of the three nations which make up the world. The story focuses on one outer Party member, Winston Smith. In illustrating both the monotonous lifestyle of Smith, and the furtive individuality of this man, Orwell provides the reader with a duality of vision; we gain a comprehensive understanding fo the rigid and limited life experience of the Party member, as well as insight to Smith's courageous, if unusual and ultimately suicidal, thoughts.

At some point during Smith's childhood, the state of constant and worldwide nuclear warfare had resulted in the creation of three separate nations, all headed by a dictator. London, where Smith lived, became a part of Oceania. From that point on, life had become a pattern of blurry past, fearful future, and endlessly monitored present. The Party's motivation for conducting life in such a manner is the statement:

"Who controls the past, controls the future:
who controls the present controls the past."

The Party member's life is controlled by a routine of work, community activities, and sleep — all of which are constantly monitored. Slaves and Prolos are excluded from this routine because the Party does not feel it necessary to exert that form of power over them; it is believed that the lower classes will never rebel.

All over Oceania, there are posters of Big Brother which read, "Big Brother is watching you!" This is symbolic of the way in which the Party members are under constant surveillance. There are four means by which the Party member is watched: he is surrounded twenty-four hours a day by telescreens, two-way televisions by which he can be constantly seen and heard; his peers are commanded to report any non-conforming behavior amongst them; the Thought Police, an undistinguishable member of which may be present at any time, discover and punish those who commit "thought crimes"; and finally, the Party member monitors himself by participating in "doublethink", a process described by Orwell in the following manner:

"To know and not to know, to be conscious of complete truthfulness while telling carefully constructed lies, to hold simultaneously two opinions which cancelled out, knowing them to be contradictory and believing in both of them, to use logic against logic, to repudiate morality while laying claim to it, to believe that democracy was impossible and that the Party was the guardian of democracy, to forget, whatever it was necessary to forget, then draw it back into memory again at the moment it was needed, and then promptly to forget it again, and above all, to apply the same process to the process itself — that was the ultimate subtlety: consciously to induce unconsciousness, and then, once again, to become unconscious of the act of hypnosis you had just performed. Even to understand 'doublethink' involved the use of doublethink."

Thus, by restricting the individual in his thoughts, emotions, and actions, the Party controls the present; it therefore controls the past, and therefore the future.

All of the aforementioned is a thematic summary of the novel. In terms of plot, the story involves both Smith and a young girl named Julia. These two become lovers, despite the Party's condemnation of such. Their lovemaking is both a romantic and a political act — the ultimate rebuttal of the Party. The pair seeks to become a part of the legendary underground movement, which hopes to destroy the power of the Party by introducing corruption from the inside-out. While the Party was aware of their "thoughtcrimes", it chose to place Winston and Julia at a pinnacle of hope before apprehending them, thereby making their fall to reality all the more harsh. All of their apparently successful efforts to escape suspicion of thoughtcrime, therefore, are to no avail. Indeed, their lovemaking, a political statement, becomes null, and their individuality is crushed when the Party decides to confront them.

Once the Party has decided to act upon Winston and Julia's thoughtcrimes, the pair is put on an extreme program of physical and mental torture. This process is geared towards forcing them into becoming typical, apathetic Oceania citizens. Ultimately, this entails total adoration for Big Brother. Both characters are prevented from this end by their love for one another. Then, this too, is crushed. In room 101, the criminals are plagued by their worst fear (for Winston, this is of rats) and, in order to save themselves, betray one another. Julia justifies their betrayals of one another in the following manner:

"Sometimes, they threaten you with something — something you can't stand up to, can't even think about. And you say, 'Don't do it to me do it to somebody else, do it to so-and-so.' And perhaps you might pretend, afterwards, that it was only a trick and that you just said it to make them stop and didn't really mean it. But that isn't true. At the time when it happens you do mean it. You think there's no other way of saving yourself and you're quite ready to save yourself that way. You want it to happen to the other person. You don't give a damn what they suffer. All you care about is yourself. And after that, you don't feel the same toward the other person any more."

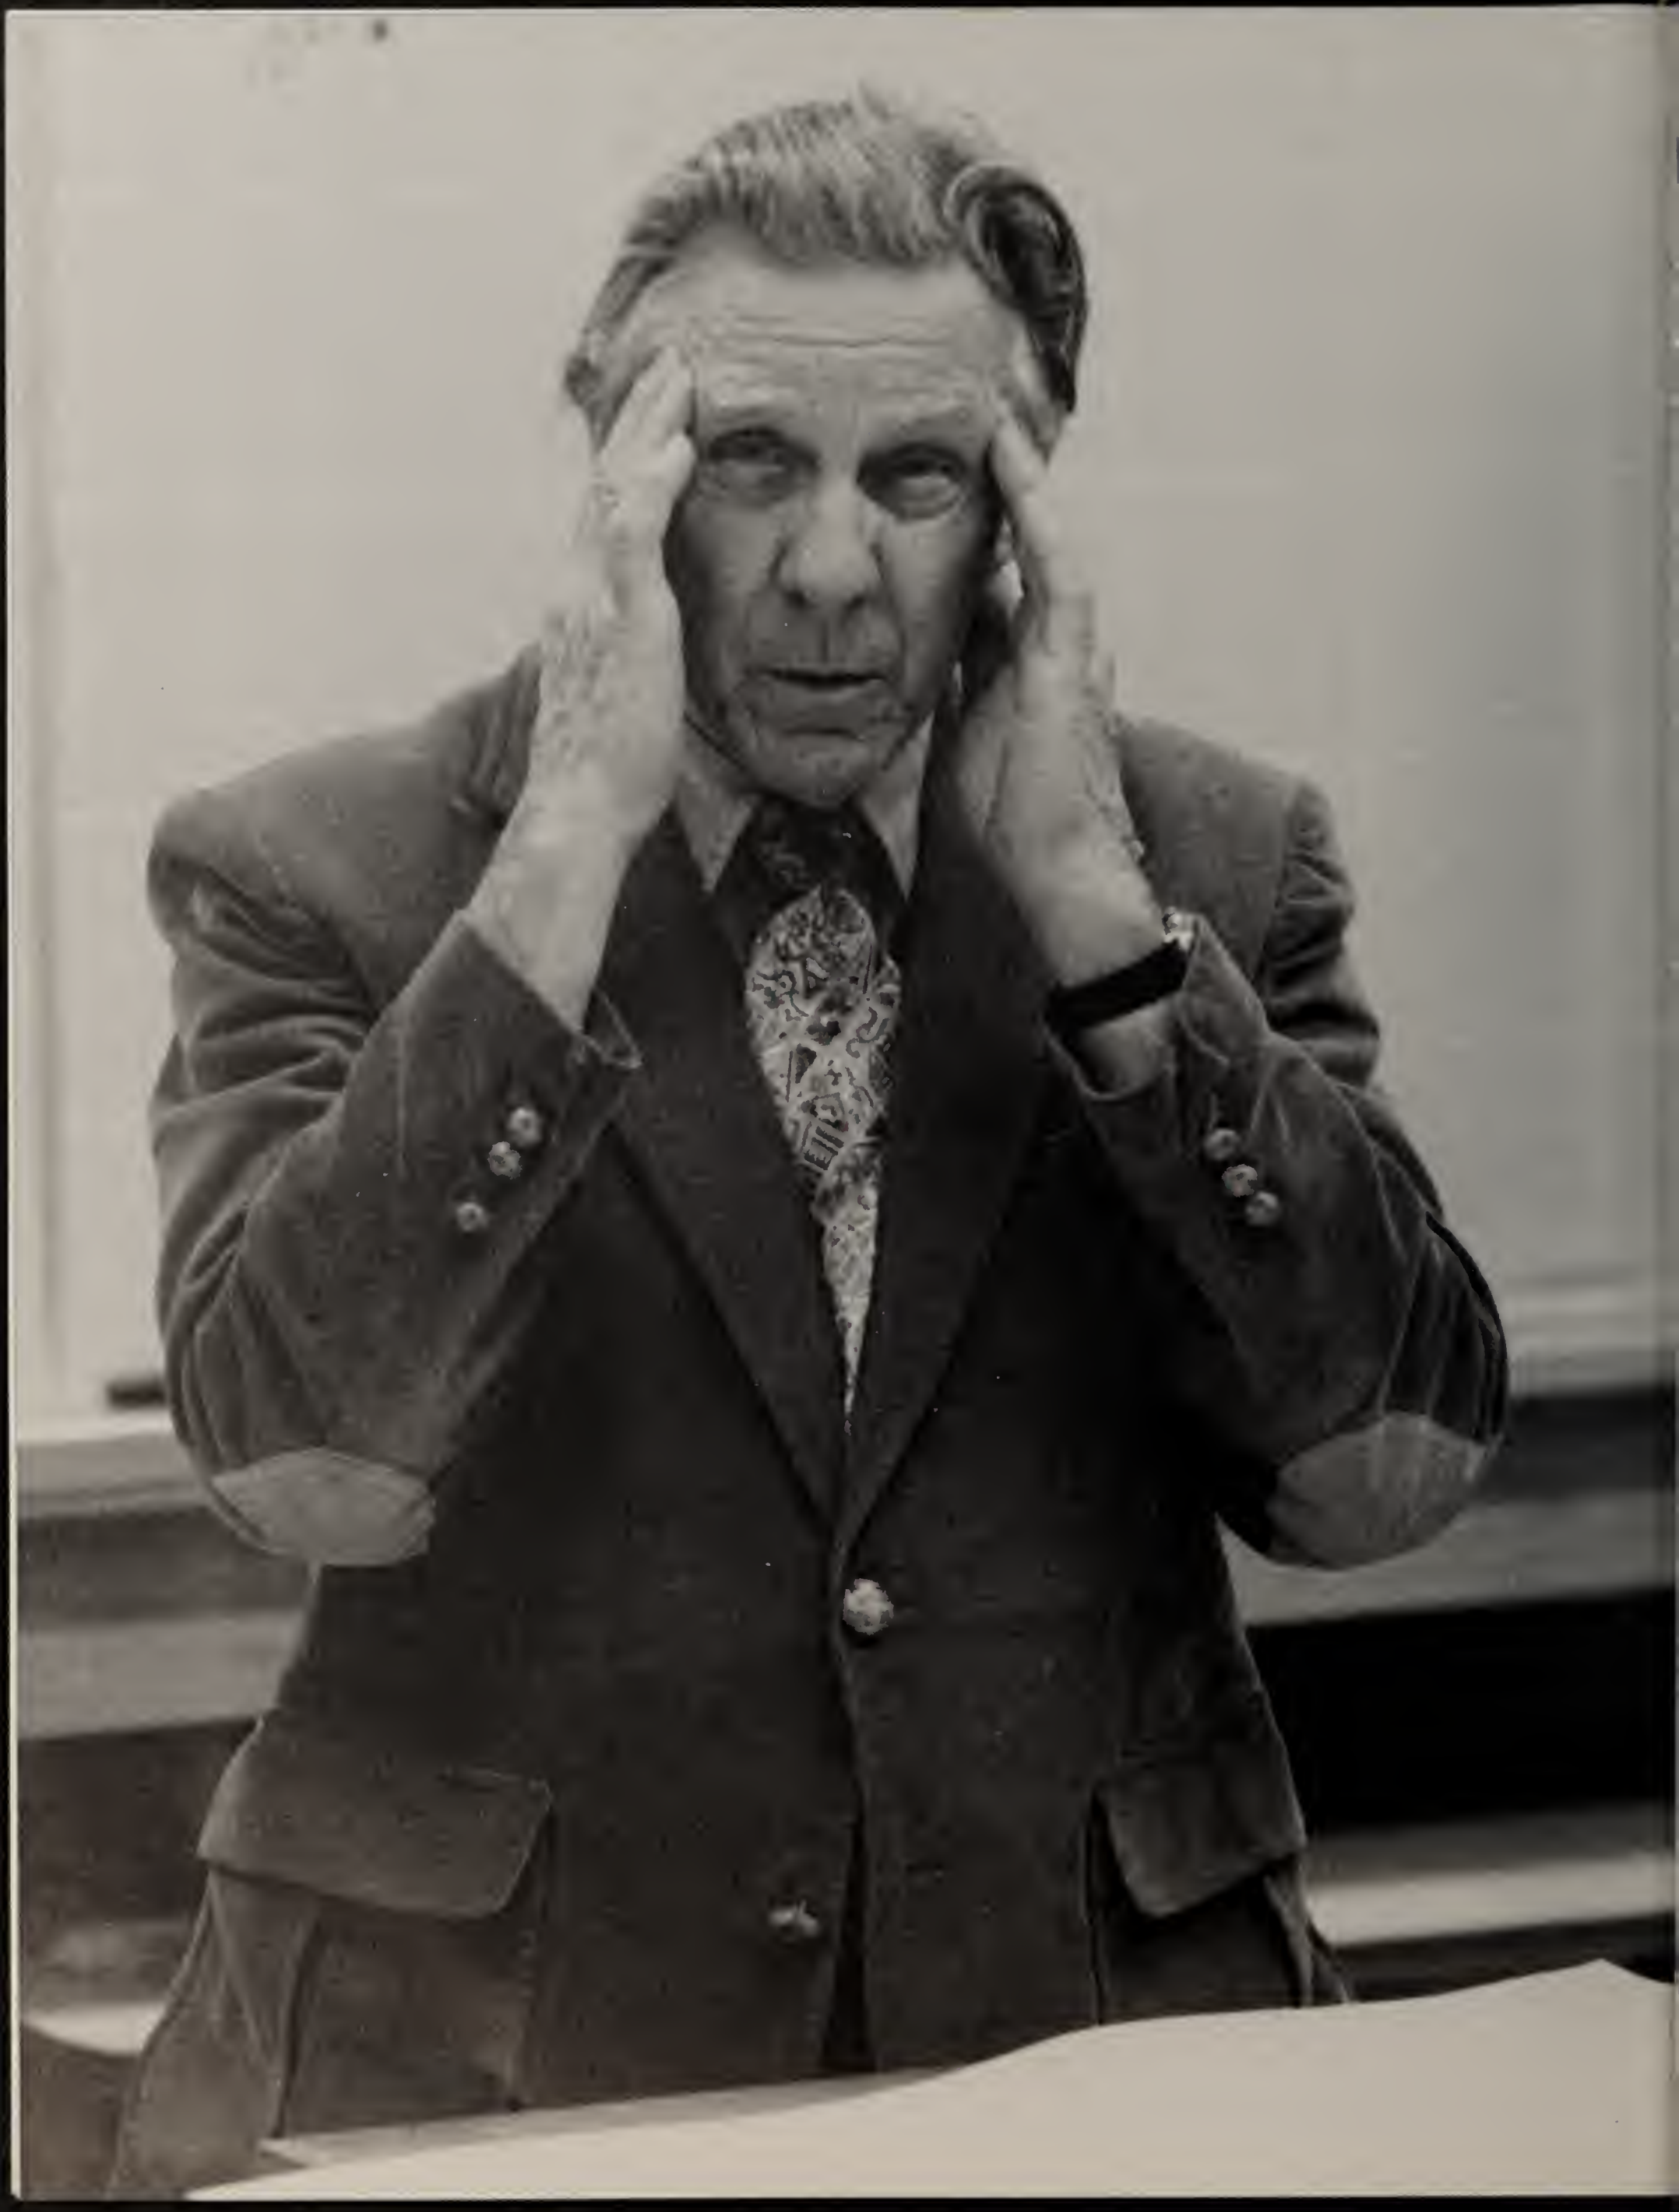

1984 has been termed a 'negative utopia." This classification is the result of an omnipresent mood of powerlessness and hopelessness in Orwell's modern man. Utopian novels, on the other hand, expressed the mood of self-confidence and hope which typified post-medieval man. In his afterword, Erich Fromm states, "There could be nothing more paradoxical in historical terms than this change: men, at the beginning of the industrial age, when in reality he did not possess the means for a world in which the table was set for all who wanted to eat, when he lived in a world in which there were economic reasons for slavery, war, and exploitation, in which man only sensed the possibilities of his new science and of its application to technique and to production — never-the-less man at the beginning of modern development was full of hope. Four hundred years later, when all those hopes are realizable, and when men can produce enough for everybody, when war has become unnecessary because technical progress can give any country more wealth than can territorial conquest, when their globe is in the process of becoming as unified as a continent was four hundred years ago, at the very moment when man is on the verge of realizing his hope, he begins to lose it." It is imperative that one recognize this historical paradox when one reads 1984. The book must not be misconstrued as merely a pessimistic or fatalistic perspective, or as merely another description of Russian communism. Orwell's 1984 is foremost a warning for modern men; it pertains to the emerging process of production and consumption which threatens to transform men into machines, and machines into men. This state of managerial industrialism has overwhelmed modern men, regardless of his myriad and differing ideologies.

It is, however, the hope that Orwell communicates, which has struck the editors of Pioneer '84 as relevant to Reading Memorial High School. Orwell implies that to render man the pathetic being which his books describe, to take from him his need for freedom, dignity, integrity, and love, would require an extreme and ruthless means. In 1984, that means is the unrestricted use of fear, as objectified in room 101. Because he percieves human nature and human needs as integral parts of our existence, Orwell implies a certain amount of hope — of potential to avoid such disaster by the inevitable assertion of our needs.

As your editors, we sought to illustrate the many ways in which our community has opposed the warning of Orwell. The various divider titles serve this purpose. In designating the senior class as the "Party members", the underclassmen as "Proles", and the faculty as the "Thought Police", for example, we aspired to contrast Orwell's fictitious world of 1984, with our own world of 1984.

In George Orwell's book, crime is kept under control by special investigators called the Thought Police. Aided by telescreens placed in every room and on every street, the Thought Police are able to keep tabs on every person living in Oceania. Not only do the Thought Police know what every one is doing at a specific moment, but they also know what each person is thinking. One small thought against Big Brother and "poof" you are vaporized, never to be seen again.

Fortunately in today's society there are no Thought Police around to limit people's ideas and thoughts. Instead we have teachers who, instead of discouraging individual thinking, actually encourage it. Teachers enable students to become individuals instead of mechanical robots programmed to think and act alike.

THOUGHT POLICE

BIG BROTHER

The aura of Big Brother's power is irrevocably entrenched in the minds of the citizens of Oc'eania. Ironically, this is primarily by virtue of the fact that he is neither seen nor heard nor touched by his people. His power is omnipresent because he is an intangible figure. In fact, he may truely be an illusion — the embodiment of fearsomeness. This is quite a contrast to our own Big Brother, Mr. D. Orlando, who is very much a tangible figure in our lives, with whom we can all feel secure.

Unlike Orwell's Big Brother, who, as far as the citizens of Oceania are concerned, has existed for all eternity, Mr. D'Orlando arrived at his position as Principal of Reading Memorial High School only recently. It was in 1978, following twenty years as a teacher, department head, and then Assistant Principal, that Mr. D'Orlando became our "ruler".

Mr. D'Orlando is the antithesis of Big Brother, both in his availability to the students and in that he gives us the freedom to assert our individuality.

Ernest G. Spence
Director of Data Processing

"Despite dire predictions for 1984, you still have a positive world in which to live. The computer, to some, is a symbol of dominance. The computer, however, will do no more than the mind of the programmer will allow. One of your greatest assets is your free will — use it wisely!"

Allan Alson
Assistant Principal

"Social control, mind control, and loss of individual freedom were all forecast by George Orwell in his novel 1984. His predictions have not blossomed to the fullness he projected. Yet, the trends he forecast are, unfortunately, in evidence in many aspects of our society. It is up to each of us, individually, and collectively, to insure that the protections designed by our constitution are neither eroded nor permanently damaged."

Maureen Zolubos
Assistant Principal

"I remember reading 1984 when I was in high school. Being a science-fiction buff, I enjoyed the story a great deal. It was rather frightening at that time to read about a civilization run entirely by the state with Big Brother keeping a close watch on every Party member. Now that the year 1984 has arrived, I am relieved that we in the U.S. haven't given up our human rights. We still have our freedom of speech and the right to choose our own life-style."

What Would We Do Without You?

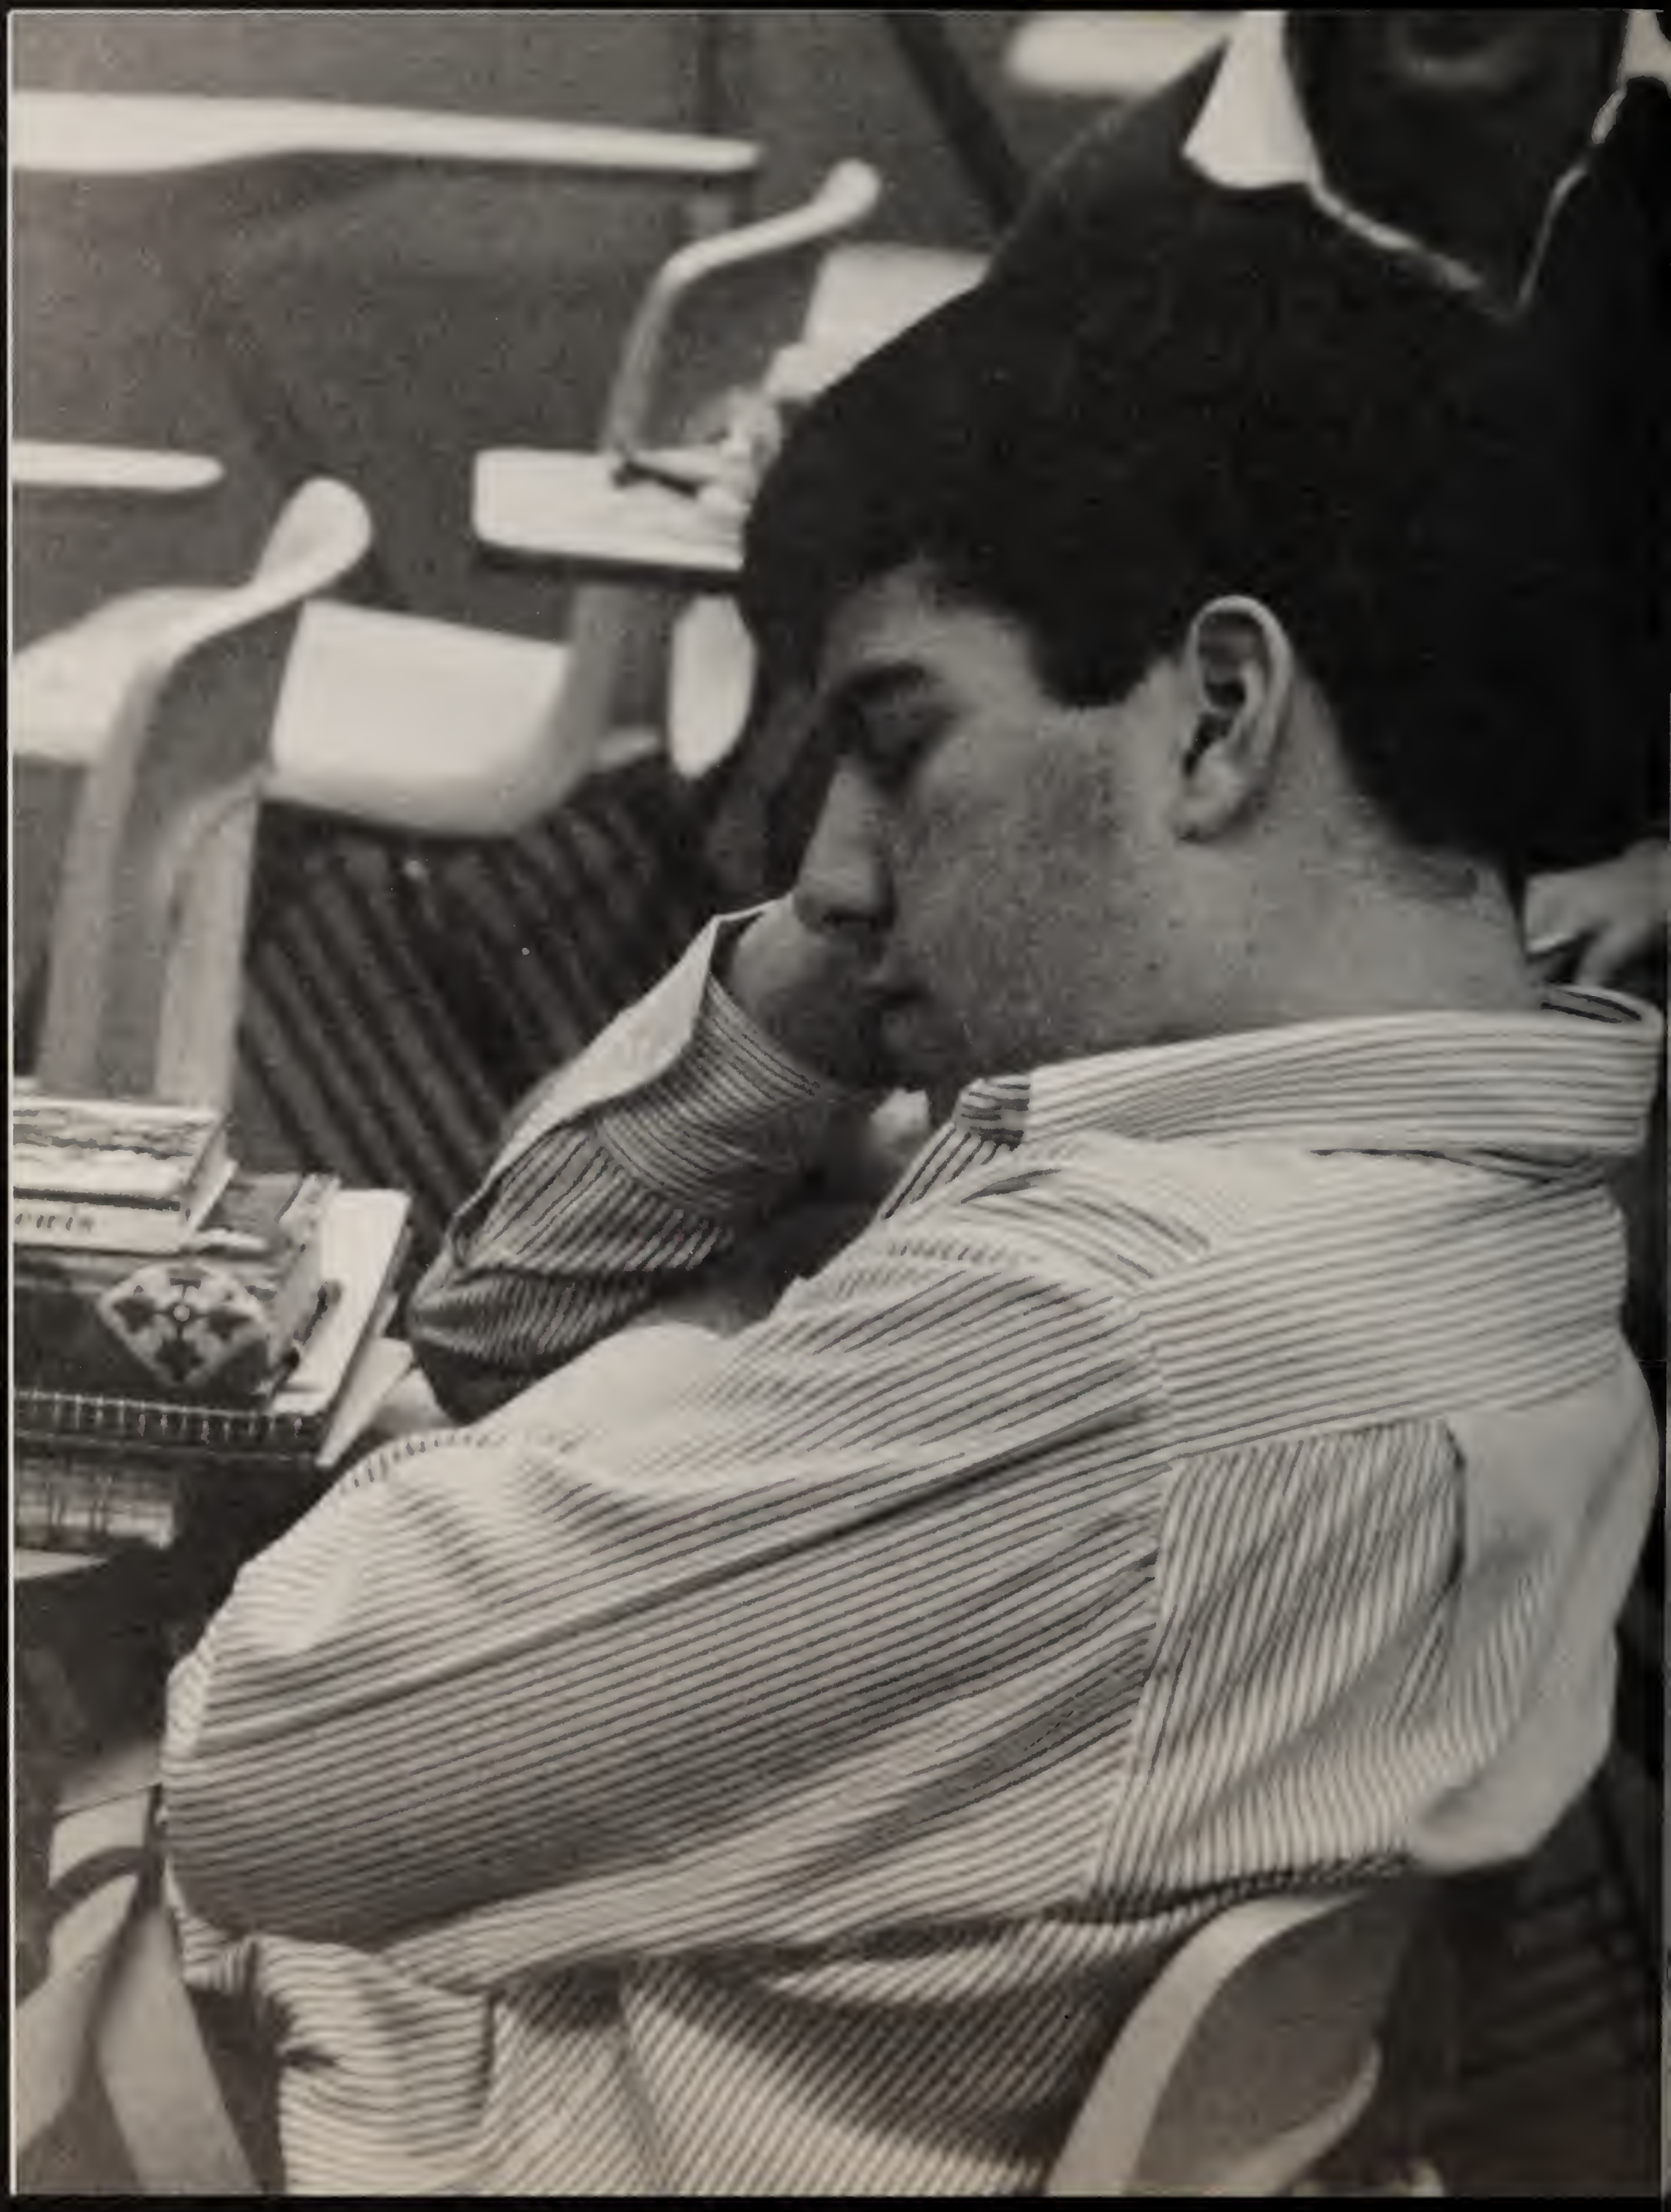

Thank You

Secretary Brian Casey, Treasurer Brett Matthews, Vice President Linda Miola, President Sean O'Connell

The class of '84 has been especially fortunate in having two very dedicated and talented people serving as its advisers for the past two years. Ms. Lanouette and Ms. Robison have helped our class achieve success in all our junior and senior class projects: the haunted houses, the junior buffet, the senior play, and the proms. Ms. Lanouette and Ms. Robison have given of their time unselfishly and have been there whenever we needed them for advice. More importanly, they have become our friends.

PARTY MEMBERS

In George Orwill's 1984, Party Members comprise approximately fifteen percent of the population. The Party is comparable to what we recognize as the upper and middle echelons of society, and is composed of an Inner and an Outer Party.

The Inner Party is perhaps two percent of the population of Oceania, the nation in which Orwell's story takes place. The Inner Party is second only in power to Big Brother, the apex of the hierachial pyramid and the guise in which the Party presents itself to the world. The use of a figurehead enables the people to attach all of their loyalty to one person. Orwell describes the relationship between the Inner and Outer Parties in the following manner: "Below the Inner Party comes the Outer Party, which, if the Inner Party is described as the brain of the state, may be justly likened to the hands." Directly beneath the Party are the Proles, whom Orwell describes as "the dumb masses". They are followed by the slaves, who are not considered a permanent or necessary part of the structure of society, because they constantly pass from conqueror to conqueror, as a result of the constant state of warfare. Therefore, the Proles are considered the lowest class.

Based on this simplified explanation of the caste system in Oceania, one might attempt to assign the name Inner Party to the senior class leaders, Outer Party to the senior class, and Proles to the underclassmen. It is true that most of the power of the senior class resides in the hands of a few, however, it is there by virtue of general consent. Reading High is an example of democracy — a government for and by the people, with power derived from, and used for the general good of, all people. In addition, there is very little of the rigidity of class separation which we see in Orwell's novel. In Oceania, Party Members rarely, if ever, interact with the Proles. At RMHS, seniors may be Party Members in one sense of elitism, but not in the sense which Orwell described. The underclassmen, as well as our classmates, are our friends and our peers.

"Life is a mystery to be lived, not a problem to be solved."

THE PROLES

In the world of 1984, there are six elements of the hierarchial pyramid: Big Brother, the Inner Party, the Outer Party, the Proles, and the slaves. Proles, the lowest class, comprise approximately eighty-five percent of society, which consists of the Inner Party, Outer Party, and Proles.

Prole stems from proletariat, which means "the working class." The Proles are embroiled in their own world of childbearing and survival. It is accepted by the Party that the Proles will never rise up and utilize their overwhelming numbers, because they are unaware of the fact that life could be different.

Any analogy made between Orwell's Proles and the underclassmen of Reading High would not be totally accurate. While underclassmen do tend to be caught up in their own circumstances, they are at times very aware of events outside of themselves and their environment. In addition, the underclassmen are capable of challenging the system — unlike Orwell's Proles.

"6079 Smith W.! Yes, you! Bend lower, please! You can do better than that. You're not trying. Lower please! That's better, comrade . . ."

"A sudden hot sweat had broken out all over Winston's body. His face remained completely inscrutable. Never show dismay! Never show resentment! A single flicker of the eyes could give you away."

In 1984, each morning begins with a shrill whistle exuding from the omnipresent telescreen — wake up call. This is followed immediately by the Physical Jerks, or morning exercises, led by an efficient woman who appears on the telescreen. These exercises, which consist mainly of stretching, exist not merely as a means of getting in better shape, but as a form of control.

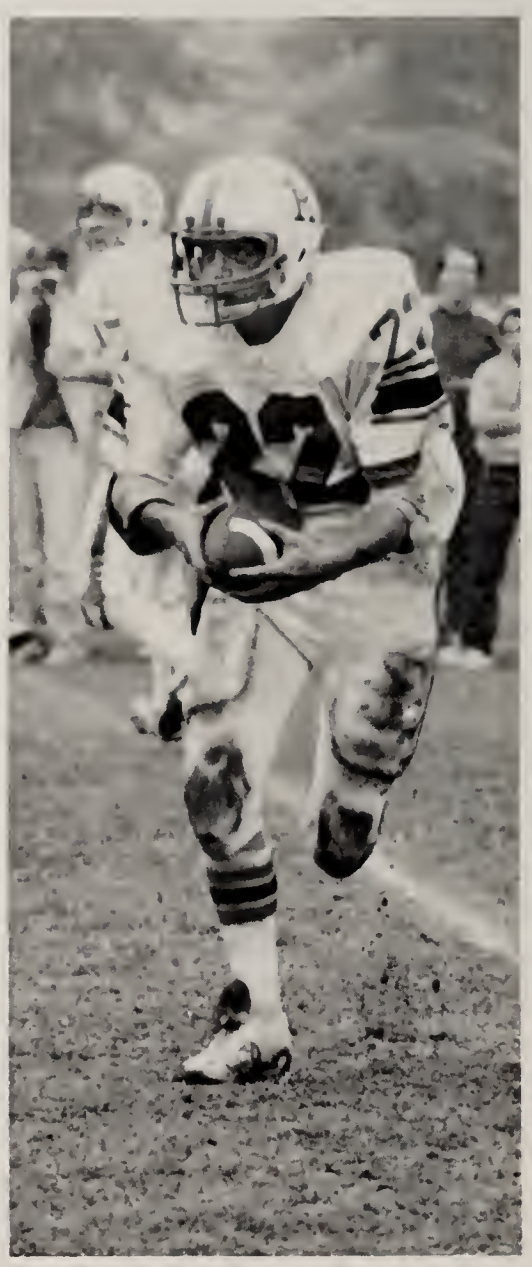

The whole theory behind the Physical Jerks is contrary to what our society conceives as the purpose and meaning of exercise. At Reading High, exercise, in the form of both sports and gym classes, acts both as a highly individual outlet of energy, and as a means of maintaining better health. Athletics at Reading High are ultimately a form of self discipline and a means of uniting the students in a common celebration of talent, achievement, and work. Sports at RMHS are fun and recreational — not a drudgery and an ugly duty, as are the Physical Jerks.

Rockets Surge

Fresh!

Up, up and away!!

Oh great, why give me the ball?

The football team had a very successful, 7-2-1 season, the best since the '74 Superbowl team. The Rockets looked sharp in pre-season action, winning four straight games including a stunning come-from-behind 7-6 victory over Lynn Classical in the first Middlesex League Football Jamboree.

After winning the first four regular season games, the Rockets appeared to be in contention for the title and perhaps a Superbowl trip. These hopes were a bit premature, however, as the team suffered two one-point losses and a tie in their next four games.

The Rockets came back the next week with a last-minute upset of first-place Watertown. Unfortunately, the Rockets' perseverance was not rewarded. They finished in second place, a mere half game out.

This year's soccer team was successful despite a 7-9-2 record. At first team spirit was low, but as the season progressed, the team became more enthusiastic and confident of a finish stronger than previous years.

Seniors Jim Burditt, Scott Murphy, Steve Fallon and Paulo Nogureia led the team to a fifth place standing in the Middlesex League. To highlight the season the Rockets defeated the Stoneham Spartans in the final game — for the first time ever.

A newcomer to the Reading Soccer program, Mike Grubor, along with Paulo Nogureia, represented Reading on the All Star soccer team.

The 1983 fall sports season was the beginning of a new era in girls athletics at RMHS. Up until this year, any girl desiring to play soccer had no choice but to join the boys soccer team. But all that changed after several girls petitioned the school board for permission to form their own team. With the board's consent and the help of coach David Lewis and assistant coach Ellie Dube, the girls ended their first season with a successful 7-5-1 record.

With the start of the new team, the girls also developed a unique system for choosing co-captains. Instead of having two permanent co-captains for the entire season, the girls chose one permanent co-captain while the other post rotated after each game. The permanent co-captain was Mary Jo English, who did a fine job leading the team. The other position was awarded each week to the most valuable player on the team. This system encouraged the girls to work hard and actually earn the title of co-captain for a week.

With five wins and four losses, the 1983 boys cross country team had a successful season. Co-captains Paul Murphy and Dave Harrison did a fine job in leading the team, and John Hayes and Fitz Hagan turned in top performances as well. The highlight of the season for the team was the league meet where the boys placed third. "We came closer to winning than most people realize," said Coach Dave Garland in reference to that event where the Rockets, the underdog team, gave it their all and showed the rest of the league what Rocket pride is all about.

Girls Cross Country

The Reading Girl's Cross Country Team finished strong in another extremely competitive fall season. The girls placed second in the Catholic Memorial meet in a field of twenty-eight teams and came in fourth out of thirty-six teams in the State Divisionals. With five wins and three losses, the club placed third in the Middlesex League, falling behind only Wakefield and Winchester.

Coach Dave Garland reflected on the season, saying, "The girls team performed admirably in a very strong league and I was very happy with their performance."

Consistent scorers were captain Gail Saunders, juniors Ellen McSweeney and Chrissie Harris and sophomores Susan Johnson and Theresa McAuley. Maureen Malone and Lynn Powers helped out with their meritorious efforts and back up points.

Departing Seniors are captain Gail Saunders and Mary Hines. Commenting on this year's cross country results, Gail Saunders remarked, "We learned a lot from each other and in the long run became better runners."

Strides Forward

Golf Team Chips Away

The 1983 golf team, coached by Mr. Gillis, finished with a 6-5-2 record. The team was undefeated in its two non-league matches against Medford and Malden. The twosome of Jeff Bochman and Jeff Miller led the Rockets with an impressive 12-1 record. Miller was Reading's Most Improved Golfer this year and has been elected the team's captain for next season.

The Rockets will lose seniors Bochman and Jeff Stanieich. Four of the team's top six golfers, Miller, Chris Muse, Matt Currie, and Tony Hibbard will return as starters next year. Mr. Gillis hopes for a successful season in 1984.

Field Hockey Shoots

Creme de la creme.

You trip me and you'll be sorry!!

The Reading field hockey program reached a new height in its development this past season. The 1983 Rockettes, led by co-captains Lisa George and Amy Dyment, and coach Kate Cremens-Basbas, had a final record of 12-2-4. This was the most successful record in the history of Reading field hockey, and resulted in the first-ever State Tournament berth experienced by the team.

There were six seniors on the team this year, most of whom had played together for the three previous years and all of whom recognized a common goal. That goal was to rise from the 1981 Varsity record of 1-12-5, to an eventual tournament qualifying record. The 1982 record was an improvement of 12-5-1 but not good enough. The team's goal was finally actualized at the end of the 1983 season.

Says Amy Dyment, "We set and achieved a significant goal and, in doing so, opened the door to a successful future in Reading field hockey."

Beyond Common Goals

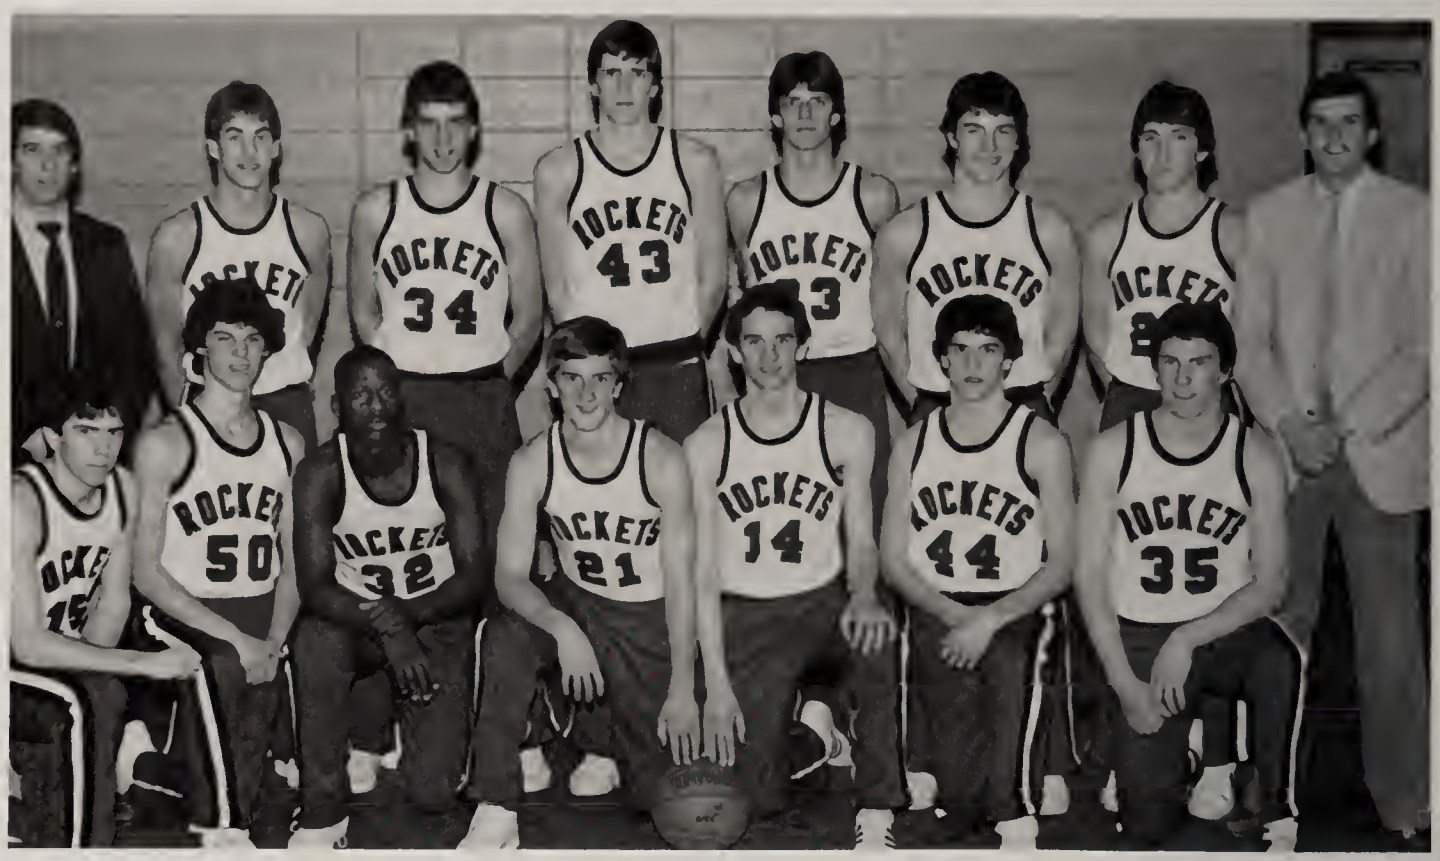

The O'Captains

Slam Dancing

Fast paced excitement marked the season for the Boy's Varisty Basketball Team this year. They were led to a 10-10 record by Co-Captains Sean O'Connell and Brian O'Sullivan. Brian Wilson and Steve Dahill both made the All-Star team and will be returning with Tom Ward and Evan Elkington next year as starters to make Reading a top team in the Middlesex League. Tim Coughlin, Mike Ahearn, Tony Crupi, and Bob D'Ambrosio under the leadership of Sean were the team's strong second stringers.

The teams greatest assets were their running and fast breaks. Coach Bill Carroll "got the kids fired up" and never threw in the towel, even when we played teams like Lexington" said Brian O'Sullivan.

Undoubtedly, this has been a great year for the Rockette basketball team. Led by co-captains Amy Dyment and Debbie Grunzweig, the girls have come a long way since the winless season of two years ago, and finished this year with twelve wins and eight losses.

The Rockettes were close to qualifying for the tournament, but were eliminated following a close loss to Stoneham.

Reading's strong starting team consisted of seniors Amy Dyment, Debbie Grunzweig, and Traci Sacco, Junior Carolina Flagg and sophomore Janice Coates. The bench was supportive and played a large role in this successful season.

"Overall," says co-captain Amy Dyment, "this has been a very productive season for RMHS girls basketball, and I know there will be a lot of great years ahead."

The 1984 Reading High hockey team finished its season with a 10-6-4 record. Placing fourth in the Middlesex League, the Rockets had a very capable team with six of its members chosen to play in the All-Star game — Jeff Hall, Brian Smith, Steven Smith, K.C. Latham, Greg Muse, and Jeff Miller.

Junior Steve Smith had an outstanding season scoring 25 goals (a new school record for a single season) and 20 assists to end the season with a total of 45 points.

The seniors on this year's team who also played an important role were Greg Muse, K.C. Latham, Jeff Hall, Brian Smith, Timmy Richards, and Jeff Bochman. Good luck next year!

The fact that hard work must preceed success definitely pertained to the boys gymnastics team this year, for it was hard work that enabled them to achieve a fourth place finish in the Colonial League.

The seniors, Nathan and Jason Cross, along with Richard Gentile and Rob Laperchia, led a young team to a final record of seven wins and five losses.

The underclassmen on the team have a lot of talent and should do well next year. The team's hard work and dedication proved to be worth it in the end.

Once again the girls indoor track team finished its season on top of the Middlesex League. Led by co-captains Gail Saunders and Stacey Wooster, the Rockettes won each of their seven meets, beating their opponents by an average of 30 points a meet. The girls also placed third at the state meet at Harvard.

Commenting on the season, first-year coach Ken Feit said. "There is no meet that stands out in my mind as being better than the others. The girls answered to the pressure at every meet and performed exceptionally well. I'm very proud of them."

"In principle a Party Member had no spare time, and was never alone except in bed. It was assumed that when he was not working, eating, or sleeping he would be taking part in some kind of communal recreations; to do anything that suggested a taste for solitude, even to go for a walk by yourself, was always slightly dangerous. There was a word for it in Newspeak: ownlife, it was called, meaning individualism and eccentricity."

Thus, the "free time" of a Party Member is spent in the midst of his comrades, performing community services and partaking in community recreation. Once again, we see, illustrated in 1984, an ideology which is not parallel to that of our own society. At Reading High, free time activities are an enjoyable release of energy and ideas — an expression of individualism.

Knowing that my AFS experience is almost over leaves me with many emotions . . . Looking back at the year, I realize how unique this experience really is . . . Getting to be a part of a new family can be tough, but if all families are as helpful and understanding as mine is, it is no sweat . . . Beginning to feel like being one of the family and that I have known my friends for a long time was one of the highlights of my year. I never thought friendship could happen in so short a time . . . Everywhere I've gone this year, I've only met friendly people, and, believe it, it really made everything much easier . . . Besides enjoying my stay at RMHS, I also loved traveling with my family and my AFS friend . . . I want to thank you all for helping in one way or another to make this year so special for me.

The popular song "Just You and I" was the theme of Reading's Class of '84's Junior Prom, which took place on April 29th.

Beginning at 8:00 PM and ending at 11:00 PM, the prom featured the muaic of the group Chimera, as well as the records of a DJ.

Aside from the fact that our Junior Prom was memorable in itself, there were two factors which rendered it unique.

First, the advent of project SADD (Students Against Driving Drunk), garnered the attention of both the students and the media. Television crews and cameras were present in the high school on the day of the prom. And later that night, Channell 5 cameras weaved across the dance floor. There was not one incident involving drunken driving among our classmates on the night of the prom.

The second significant factor surrounding our Junior Prom, was the fact that, for the first time in Reading's history, it was held outaide of the school. This privilege was the result of much labor on the part of our class leaders, as well as of a large treasury.

Thus, a successful evening of dancing and music was the result of much class spirit, work, and awareness of dangers. Congratulations to the class of 1984.

YOU AND I

Brrr! It's cold this morning. I hope Dave comes out to start me soon — or else we might not make it to school on time. Ah, here he comes now.

Well, we made it to downtown Reading. The road here is a lot smoother since they resurfaced it last summer — easier on my shocks. The rest of Main Street is a different story. The passing lane is in good condition, but the right lane is very painful on my treads.

Hey, Dave, slow down! Fifty is too fast for Main Street. Boy! We just cleared that car by two inches. Oh, oh! Here come the lights. Slow down!

The traffic around Reading High School in the morning is the worst. Ordinarily, it's heavy and slow going, but during a rain or snow storm, Oakland Road should be declared a disaster area. Most of my friends slide all over that big hill in front of the school, sometimes barely making it to the top.

I have to stop talking for a minute while I brace myself for the speedbumps. Whoaa! Ouch! Ah, thank goodness that's over with. All that's left now is to find a parking space. Good, there's one.

Well, that's all for now — at least until fifth period. I hope we make a McDonalds run — we cars just love that drive thru!

We all live for the weekends. Wednesday, the anticipation begins. By Thursday, we're getting eager. On Friday, it's T.G.I.F.

For some of us, the weekend means party, party, party! For others it's a chance to get away from it all. But, for everyone, it's welcome.

Despite the complaint that there is nothing to do in Reading, we all seem to find something to do.

Capri, McDonalds, and "downtown" in general, are all common scenes. But not everyone is downtown. Some are in North Reading, Stoneham, Wilmington, or Woburn — at the movies or the malls. Some can be found in local cemeteries, woods, and parking lots — "just hangin' around". And some of us are quietly at home watching t.v., playing video games, or listening to our stereos.

But how often do we think about, much less appreciate, our freedom of choice among so many options? If this were in fact an Orwellian society, or a community with the propensity to develop into an Orwellian society, there would be no freedom of choice and no options. We would be forced to account for our every action at every moment.

In conclusion, there is hope for mankind in his weekends! So enjoy!

"After all, what is a fashion? From an artistic point of view, it is usually a form of ugliness so intolerable that we have to change it every six months."

— Oscar Wilde

In their adherence to fashion, high school students are often considered to epitomize conformity. As one looks around RMHS, he may observe the preps, the punkers, and the followers of other fashions and be tempted to label them predictable conformists. But, as the quote above points out, fashion also exemplifies change and rebellion from the norm. Each mode of dress is unique in the point it strives to make. Each individual who adopts that style is himself stating a viewpoint — the idea that what is present may not be perfect, but it is better than what has gone before.

"Hey, Steve. Whatcha doin' this weekend?"

"I'm so bummed, I gotta work Friday and Saturday nights!"

"Bummer. I guess you can't make it to the party tonight, huh?"

Does this sound familiar? In today's society where movie tickets cost over $4.00 and gas is $1.10, teenagers need a steady source of income. Unless you've inherited a fortune, the only way to make money is to find a job.

Here, in Reading, teenagers work at a variety of jobs. From McDonalds to the Woburn Mall, RMHS students are working everywhere. In George Orwell's 1984, people were not so lucky. Party members were forced to work where they were needed, often under the worst of conditions with no relief in sight. At least in today's society teenagers can quit their jobs if the going gets too tough.

Although teenagers often grumble or complain about working on the weekends, the satisfaction of bringing home a paycheck cures most students of the "working blues". Having their own money to spend not only gives teenagers a chance to be themselves, but to gain independence from their parents. So, the next time you're caught working — Smile! It isn't so bad after all.

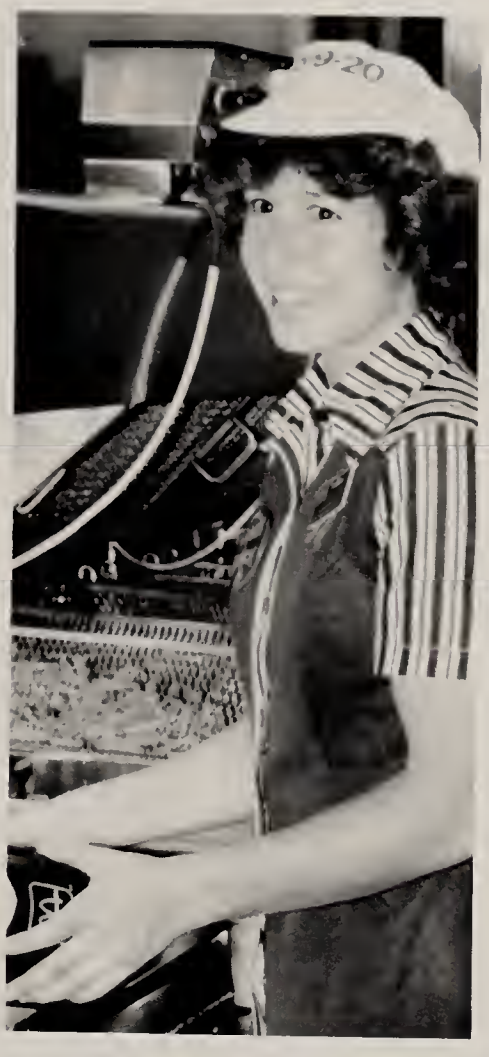

JOBS

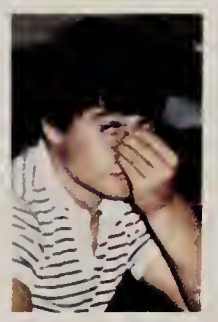

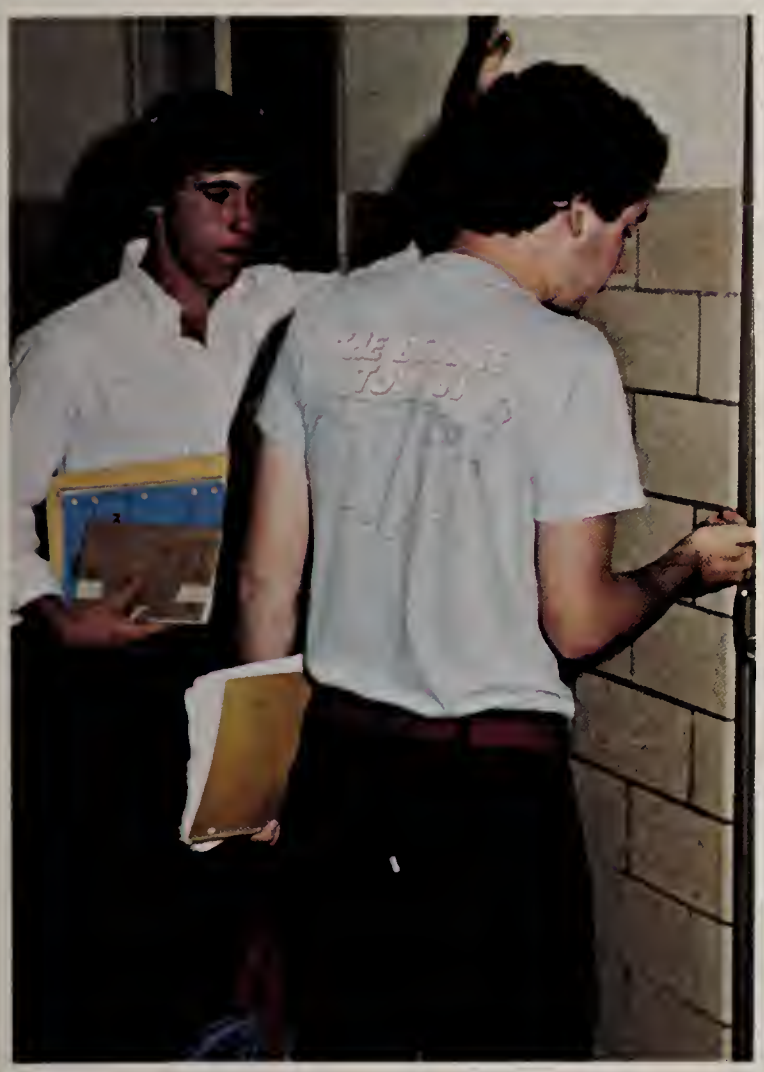

SMILE!

The fall sports season came as a big surprise to many people. The surprise, however, was not in the athletic teams, but in the RMHS band.

Over the summer, David Bunten joined the RMHS faculty as band director and became the driving force behind the "new band". Even before the opening of school, Mr. Bunten had organized a band camp in order to acquaint band members with basic playing and marching formations.

Since then, under the leadership of Mr. Bunten and student band director Rick Vinci, the band has come a long way. The mandatory after school and Saturday morning practices have not dwindled the size of the band, but have increased its spirit and determination in hopes of beginning a new tradition in music at RMHS.

Back Row: Advisor Debbie Sweeney, Stephanie Langeleh, Suzanne Bourke, Kara Kelly, Tracy Sacco, Meg Maloney, Pam Denutte and Marissa Lane.

This year marked a significant change in the Baton Squad program. Most of us enjoy the end result of this program but few of us perceive it as a hard-working team with obstacles to overcome. Captain Jon D'Entremont cited the new band program as a change which was difficult to adjust to. Through diligence and under the leadership of Joan, Nancy Firicano, and Debbie Johnson, as well as advisor Mrs. Sweeny, the squad was successful in adapting.

A development which many were aware of this year was the tremendous comraderie and excitement among the Baton Squad and the Cheerleaders which was contagious.

1984 was the year that cheerleading became a letter winning sport. The senior team of cheerleaders led by captains Kristine Howard and Sheila D'Arcy, practiced every day after school to perfect their routines for the football and basketball games. Their hard work and determination paid off as they finished second in the Middlesex League competitions.

The junior cheerleaders, led by seniors Katie McMahon and Chrissie Birmingham, also had a successful year and are looking forward to next year's football season. Good luck as seniors and keep up the good work!

The American Way Of Life

What is it?

We see it as ways of life. Not one way, but many. Like individuals. Each with their own distinct goal, life style, likes and dislikes, needs and wants.

That's the real American way of life. And the insurance industry helped protect it for hundreds of years. By individualizing products to help people protect their prized possessions — car, home or business. Or an income — so when laid-up, the cash is there to help maintain a life style. Even a life — so a family unit can maintain its way of life after the catastrophic loss of the family head.

We're a business of people helping people preserve their ways of life.

That's our bag. What's yours? If it's helping people and you want to get involved, talk to American Mutual.

Call our Personnel Department for a glimpse at our way of life.

SENIOR PLANS

It seems that every year when the seniors leave, the immediate underclassman reaction is to comment and rejoice about the sudden amount of room in the corridors, especially at the intersection near Mr. D'Orlando's office. Also, when the seniors go, the juniors are delighted when they find themselves with ample parking space in the morning. Although these are the first non-senior instincts, it later becomes evident that every part of the school begins to miss the graduates, the Class of 1984.

There are many things that the juniors, sophomores, and freshmen, have to thank you--the Class of 1984--for. Most important among these is the code of behavior which you have set. Throughout your four high school years, your class has exhibited a very sincere sense of responsibility for each other. This quality drew your class together at all times, whether you were holding the "Guess how many candy corns are in the jar" contest in your sophomore year, or preparing for the only "out-of-school" junior prom in RMHS history or pumpkining Mr. Vaccaro's house on Halloween of your senior year. Your class was characterized by a sense of unity that will hopefully be emulated by the remaining high school students in their future years at RMHS.

But now that you are gone and the juniors are gradually assuming their new positions as leaders of the school, we wish your class the best of luck in the future. Although you will all branch out and head in your own directions, in our minds you will always remain as one unified class. A true class with class--the Class of 1984.

Sincerely,

The remaining high school students
